

CALL FOR PAPERS

23rd ANNUAL MACRO CONFERENCE

The 23rd Macro Conference will be held online on December 11-12, 2021. In light of the continuous spread of COVID-19 infection, we have decided to hold the meeting online. You are cordially invited to submit a research paper for presentation at the conference:

- Papers should be written either in English or Japanese.
- There is no specific theme for the conference; however, we especially welcome studies (theoretical or empirical) that address issues confronting the Japanese economy. In particular, we welcome papers on various aspects of the post-pandemic economy.
- In the selection process, there is a possibility that priority will be given to young researchers/graduate students when choosing among papers of comparable quality.
- Full papers are preferred but a 10-page abstract is also acceptable. If your acceptance is based on a 10-page abstract, then your full paper should be submitted to all members of the program committee, and designated discussants, by Friday, December 3, 2021 (Japan time).
- Please recommend two candidates for discussants (it is not necessary to obtain their prior consent).
- Papers should be sent by simultaneous email to all members of the program committee as listed below.
- Even when your paper is written/presented in English, we allow the audience to ask questions or make comments in Japanese (one of us will translate them for you, if necessary).

Deadline: Friday, October 22, 2021 (Japan time)

Acceptance Notification: Approximately Monday, November 22, 2021.

We look forward to receiving many interesting submissions.
